Halla – neck scarf

In summer 2024 we elected a new president for Iceland. With a participation of over 80% of all voters it was very much a national event.

Amongst the 6 strongest candidates was Halla, sporting a neat silk neck scarf for her first appearance at a television debate. This became a much talked about fashion statement - although it emerged that she was wearing it because of an oncoming cold that day. She and her supporters started wearing neck scarves and made it their “trade mark” during the campaign weeks running up to the elections. The media talked about a neck-scarf revolution.

And Halla went on to win the elections.
We decided to create a woollen version!
Congratulations Halla!
